

Never Alone Manifesto

The Holy Spirit was given to me to:

- guide me as I guide my children;
- strengthen me in my weakness so my children will see what is only possible in His power;
- pray for me in perfect accordance with God's will for my family;
- increase my capacity when I say, "It's too much. I can't do this another day";
- bring peace to my chaotic mind that longs to control things that belong to God;
- speak truth over the condemning thoughts I can have about myself as a mom;
- illuminate Scripture as I study the truth He inspired;
- fill me with joy in what typically feels like mundane deeds;
- remind me of the significance of my unseen sacrifice;
- cultivate deeper intimacy in my relationship with Jesus;
- put truth on my tongue to share with my struggling teen;
- bring hope to my hurting heart for my prodigal daughter or son;
- help me persevere when the endless tasks of raising toddlers overwhelm me;
- choose gentleness when my flesh wants to flare in anger;
- comfort me in my loneliness or grief;
- counsel me as I make choices on behalf of my children;
- assure me that His presence in me is greater than anything I will encounter today;
- convict me when I need to repent of my sin and receive the Lord's refreshment;
- fill my heart with God's love so that it will overflow in my home;
- produce God-glorifying fruit in my life for my children to witness and desire;
- champion the unique gifts God has stored in me as a mom, for the glory of the Father!

Lifeway women

#NeverAloneBibleStudy | @jeanniecunnion